Western Cedar: Legend of the Canadian Forest

No one knows the unique properties of this exceptional wood better than the coastal native peoples of Western Canada. For thousands of years they revered Western Red Cedar as an integral part of their culture. They relied upon its strength and durability in the building of their lodges. Its light weight and unique water-resistance made it ideal for their dugout canoes. And its beautiful grains, mellow hues and great longevity, made it a perfect material for their legendary totem carvings and ceremonial masks.

Western Red Cedar also played a major role in the development of the Canadian West, providing early European settlers with an exceptionally durable and reliable material for their homes.

It is this great and ancient legacy of material and craft that Surefit Custom Log Homes can build for you.
